SALVATION ARMY PLANS TO ESTABLISH BRANCH IN CHINA

HONGKONG, December 1.—To carry out the last wishes of the late General Booth—the formation of a Chinese Salvation Army—Colonel D. C. Lamb, immigration commissioner and head of the international department of the army, has been visiting the Chinese capital. He is now on his way to London to report to the new commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, recommending the establishment of the Salvationists of China.

"It is the physiological moment for the formation of a Chinese section of the army," said Col. Lamb. "The changing conditions, together with the movement under way among the Chinese themselves for the establishment of a corps with similar aims to those of the Salvation Army with native Christians at the head of the movement, lead themselves to the enterprise. There could not be a better time for the establishment of the army in China, and I will report recommending that the step be taken at once. I did not interview Yuan Shih Kai, Dr. Sun Yat Sen, or others but I think we can look for their support. Dr. Sun especially is keenly interested in the spreading of any western movement. The Chinese today are keenly interested in Christianity, but, as is also the case in Korea and Japan, there is distinct lack of spiritualism. The people of the three countries are maturing and are mostly lost in a sea of doubt regarding their religious beliefs. "The movement of the native Chinese on at present is for the formation of what is known as the 'Eastern Salvation Army.' I have no doubt, though, that those now engaged in this work will come under the universal banner and the work of assembling them under the Salvation flag will be taken soon after I make my report. "I was in Peking when I received the and news of the death of General Booth, and I immediately recalled the fact that shortly before I left for China he had spoken to me of his great desire that the Salvation Army be extended throughout China before he died. I feel sure that the general's last desire will be fulfilled."

INTERNATIONAL SHOW PLANNED BY DAIRYMEN.
Organization of all stockmen, poultry raisers and dairymen on the Pacific coast into a $50,000 or $100,000 corporation for the purpose of holding an International Live stock show in Portland annually, is the plan advanced by President J. W. Clise of Seattle, Wash., present head of the Pacific International Dairy show.

Such an organization would involve 500 cattle owners and stockmen, with an estimated capital of more than $10,000,000. Mr. Clise, who makes the suggestion, was in charge of the livestock department of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition at Seattle.

W. H. Daughtrey, president of the Union stockyards, also declared in favor of such a project, and steps will be taken at once to carry out a plan of this character, according to a coast exchange.
